

New Online Wedding Shop Launches

Planning a wedding is a mammoth task, with so many things to think about, it can be exhausting. Cars, photos, suitable attire are amongst the main things that are considered when planning a wedding.

Additional extra's such as wedding gifts, disposable cameras and wedding cufflinks can sometimes be forgotten, but can make all the difference to the enjoyment of a wedding day. Now an enterprising and established wedding website has just launched a new online store to save time and money for its visitors. The new online store is located at www.weddingchaos.co.uk.

This online store provides a whole host of items that many consider as the little things, which we all know can make a big difference. The range of products include disposable cameras, which can be supplied to guests to take unrehearsed photos of the special day for posterity through to items such as wedding cufflinks, table decorations and wedding favours, many of which can even be personalised to make them more individual. All of the products are shown in detail with images, where required and detailed information about the product as well as prices.

The purchasing process is efficient and streamlined which is achieved by the effective and comprehensive shopping cart facility. Online payment processing is provided which is secure and offers maximum security.

David Cartlidge, Executive Director, said "As part of the continuing evolution of the Weddingchaos website, this is a natural progression and we consider this a big step forward for Wedding chaos. We already provide a wealth of advice, discussion forums and a directory of wedding suppliers and professionals, bringing the shop online is one more piece of the jigsaw as we move towards our goal of being a one-stop website for anybody planning a wedding"

The launch of the weddingchaos online store provides its numerous visitors with a valuable range of additional gifts and accessories to provide that extra element to any wedding. The website is a respected and renowned wedding planning website which has helped many plan their wedding by offering sound advice and relevant information and resources. With the addition of the online store, this website has accomplished its goal of becoming the first and last port of call for anyone planning a wedding.
