

Price Hike For Weddings

Weddings can be an expensive venture, with the multitude of services that are on offer, such as wedding cars, reception venues and wedding cakes. One issue that causes some concerns with many people looking to book or buy items related to a wedding is the apparent differences in prices for similar items.

Two items can be exactly the same but when the item is specifically for a wedding the price can be quoted differently, usually increased.

A leading wedding website www.weddingchaos.co.uk, offers a useful and user friendly forum where matters such as this are discussed and debated. Its recent poll asked a simple question "Do you think prices go up when you mention the word 'wedding'?" and the responses were unanimous in saying that the majority, in fact 95% of respondents said yes, they felt prices were increased when the supplier realised the item was for a wedding.

Some of the examples mentioned include limo cars, wedding cakes and even reception venue meals, all of which the members had experienced an increase in price when mentioning that the purpose of the enquiry was for a wedding.

Several had also contacted the same company previously to find out the cost for the same item but for a different type of event such as a birthday or anniversary and found a significant lower price. This all leads to the point of fairness, the fact that the item is the same whether it's for a birthday or a wedding is the main reason many are angered about this situation, seeing it as simply exploitation and profiteering.

www.weddingchaos.co.uk is an informative and useful resource which as the name suggests is aimed at the wedding market. Its informative pages include a variety of useful resources such as a blog, directory and even pages listing discount codes, which in the present climate are very welcome. The website provides a whole host of advice and contacts with the sole aim of helping people organise their wedding with as little fuss as possible.

Its growing membership is testimony to its popularity which considering the informative nature of the website is understandable. With the advent of the internet information, advice and purchases can all be done much quicker and efficiently than ever before, choosing the right suppliers can make a great deal of difference to a wedding and as such it pays to take advice from a renowned and respected resource such as www.weddingchaos.co.uk.
